Personally, I discovered Moon FM after I wanted to download and curate my own podcast. I quickly realized that Moon FM is more than an app to listen to your favorite podcasts, it's also a very handy resource when it comes to actually discovering new content. Most people use the app to discover new podcasts, but with the beta release of the app, I thought I'd share a few useful features, as well. Moon FM is a complete podcast app, which means you don't have to look for a podcast in another app. You can search for a podcast within the app itself. You can also access podcasts without Wi-Fi connection. Like you, I'm a big believer in the Discover and Browse functions of Moon FM. For me, listening to podcasts without Wi-Fi is crucial; I'm often doing so on a plane. In fact, I still use Google Podcasts for just that. If you use the Internet to listen to podcasts, Moon FM is a must-have. The app lets you search for podcasts in categories as well as other types. Yes, for a beta release, Moon FM is pretty solid.
